

About the Arizona Solar Energy Association

The Arizona Solar Energy Association (ASEA) is the Arizona affiliate of the American Solar Energy Society (www.ases.org). Founded in the 1970s as a technical association of early solar technology professionals, the group has evolved into a diverse assemblage of individuals who share a common interest in sustainable human activity and the use of solar energy. ASEA reaches out to both professionals and non-professionals alike.

As a founding and sustaining organizational member of the Arizona Solar Center (www.AZSolarCenter.org), ASEA provides a platform for its members to educate and advocate for a sustainable future for Arizona. Depending upon local preferences, local chapters may have meetings, workshops, a newsletter and other activities. Members are active in industry associations, the Arizona Corporation Commission (ACC), the State Legislature, the Maricopa Association of Governments (MAG), the Governor’s Solar Energy Advisory Council (SEAC), and other groups.

ASEA sponsors, hosts, and participates in events throughout Arizona that focus on education and demonstration of appropriate solar technologies. Whether it's a solar cook-off, a seminar on how to size a photovoltaic power system, or a workshop on implementing passive solar design, ASEA offers many opportunities for its members to learn about the applications of solar energy and to show others how they have applied their knowledge to benefit themselves and our environment.

Your donation supports ASEA efforts. ASEA is entirely a volunteer, non-profit organization and welcomes new supporters. Whether you simply want to support our efforts with your donation or want to also become actively involved, we welcome your participation. Please join us in our efforts to achieve a sustainable future for Arizona. Visit the ASEA website for more information (www.ArizonaSolarEnergy.org). You may also visit the ASES website for a combined ASES/ASEA membership.
